WHITE BREAD THE COMPLETE FOOD

Ow some years efforts were made by individuals and organizations to induce people to eat less white bread and more bran bread. Mostly these efforts were calculated to bring profits to manufacturers of patent foods containing large quantities of bran. Recently Dr. Alvarez, of the Mayo Clinic Rochester Minnesota, issued a warning against consuming bran for roughage, saying there are distinct hazards attached to the loading of the human alimentary tract with quantities of such rough foods. Dr. Alvarez says: "White bread comes close to being a complete food because the baker adds vitamins in the form of milk and yeast and sometimes irradiated ergosterol and when a man eats a slice he usually gets a better meal than he would from a loaf that has served our fathers so well."

THE RURAL POSTMAN

(For the Benefit of Rural Mail Drivers)
In the cold and blustery weather When the frost is on the rail, Would you like to face a blizzard With half a ton of mail?
In the biting blizzard weather When the snow comes to your knees, Would you love to fish for pennies While your feet and fingers freeze?
When the gleaming snow is drifted Underneath a foot of sleet, Would you love to have the chilblains In your elbows and your feet?
When out doors the wind is whistling And the air is full of snow, Would you love to have a fitney And the blame thing wouldn't go?
Yes, I'd love the good old fireside Shipping coffee from a pea, But I have to buck the snow drifts, Cause the farmers want their mail.
I don't mind the frozen snowdrifts When your legs are stiff with cramps, If you keep your blooming pointers, Buy a quarters worth of stamps.
I get now mixed in my whiskers And I get it in my socks, But I never hurt my feelings, Like loose pennies in the box.

WHEN ELECTION ROLLS AROUND

(By Ferguson James)
I'm a poor Alberta farmer In the dry belt on the plain; I've weathered years of hardships, Perplexities and pain. I've watched the dust clouds drifting And the cattle droop and die; I've tightened up my belly-band When my dinner pail went dry I've had to make decisions, But I'm stumped now, I'll be bound. How in h'll to mark my ballot When election rolls around. The present Farmers Government Are asking for our votes; They say, if they're elected, We'll have food for pigs and goats. The cows will all have heifer calves, The mares have filly foals; The muskrats will return again, The fish will come in shoals; They'll dam the whole dam country-side In every nook and draw; They'll bring the old age pension down To sixty years for "Paw"; They'll cut the farmers' debts in two And throw the interest off; They'll squeeze the old financier And make him sneeze and cough; They'll play us fair and so they say We are in duty bound To vote a Farmer ticket When election rolls around. Then Mr. Howson comes along And says Boys look to me; I'll put through laws in parliament To make this country free. Clean out this bunch of grafters And hand me your support I'll curb the money gangsters And make the combine sort. I'll do all I hold has promised you Don't run this ship around, But vote your ballot "Howson" When election rolls around. Then Social Credit steals the show. And Mr. Aberhart Comes out with monthly dividends And rips them all apart. He makes them look like fifty cents With his fantastic scheme, With Paradise right here on earth And life a perfect dream. I'm just a poor old farmer As I tell this dusty ground I'm asking Supreme Guidance When election rolls around.

Gerald Youell celebrated his sixtieth birthday by inviting a number of his little Chinook friends to his birthday party while here on his Easter holidays.

JAPAN SELF-SUFFICIENT IN WHEAT GROWING

Three years ago Japan commenced a five-year plan to attain self-sufficiency in wheat production. The principal feature of the plan was the subsidizing of wheat growers. The wheat growers respond so enthusiastically that the condition of self-sufficiency has already been reached. This has occasioned considerable concern to authorities, according to Canadian commercial attache at Tokyo. The plan is being revised and greater emphasis being laid on improvement in quality instead of increased production. In 1931 Japan's wheat crop reached the record figure of 46,875,740 bushels as compared with 39,744,683 bushels in 1933. This crop relieved Japan of any shortage of wheat for local requirements. A certain volume of wheat must be imported in order to produce a higher gluten flour for import. The commercial secretary estimates the total import requirements for the year at three million bushels.

Japan has among its industries quite an extensive flour milling group, total daily production capacity being 49,000 barrels of flour. The Nishin and Nippon company corporations are the biggest flour milling concerns, the former being able to turn out 22,200 barrels a day and the latter 17,700. These companies are the dominant ones in the Japanese flour milling industry and are controlled by the great commercial houses of Mitsubishi and Mitsu. Owing to the nature of the flour milling process used in Japanese roller mills it is absolutely necessary to use at least 10% of foreign wheat. The Japanese are normally rice-eating people and wheat flour in Japan is used mostly in the noodle manufacturing industry which it takes nearly 50% of the total consumption. A considerable quantity of flour is exported, last year's total being 5,844,132 cwt. as against 7,001,500 cwt. for the previous year, a reduction of 16.5 per cent. This reduction was due to a decline in shipments to Dairen where Australia took a considerable portion of the market. One time Canada supplied Japan the greatest percentage of imported wheat. However, in 1930 when Australia inflated her money, Canada lost the greater part of the Oriental market. Monetary inflation gave Australia a 49% advantage which Canada could not meet. The last two years the percentage of each country's share of wheat imports into Japan were as follows:

Australia	1834	1933
United States	54.7	7.4
Canada	27.3	0.8
China and others	16.3	22.0
	1.7

BEWARE OF THE CLOTHES MOTHI

The damage caused by clothes moths in Canada every year is extensive and the prevention of that damage requires the exercise of care, forthright, and vigilance, states the Dominion Entomologist, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Articles of clothing and other materials subject to moth attack should not be left undisturbed for long periods, particularly during the summer months, in such places as cupboards, attics, and trunks unless adequate precautions have been taken to protect them. The articles after being thoroughly brushed should be placed in well-made trunks or chests with tightly fitting lids, or enclosed in cotton or paper bags, or in cardboard boxes sealed with paper strips. Wrapping cloth in two thicknesses of strong wrapping paper taking care that the edges are turned down so that no moths can gain entrance, is also recommended as an alternative measure. According to the Dominion Entomologist, one pound of fresh naphthalene flakes, or a similar quantity of paradichlorobenzene scattered among the garments in an ordinary sized trunk assures perfect protection from moth injury. When cotton or paper moth bags are used, use half pound of either of the above chemicals may be enclosed in each bag as an additional precaution. When entire buildings are badly infested with moths, superheating the rooms, or fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas, but under expert supervision only is recommended.

Your Boys

I have four sons, two of them approaching the age when they must go out and face the earning of a living, write a man to a newspaper. In his disturbed and troubled over the prospect of the difficulties which for the time being may confront these young men in obtaining employment and making a start in life? No, he is wise enough and has had experience enough to realize that countless thousands of other young men starting to carve out careers for themselves had to face difficulties and had many obstacles to overcome. No doubt he passed through such experiences himself. It has been the way of the world since time immemorial.

Nevertheless this father of four boys is worried. He has reason to be, and so, too, have other parents all over the land. This man writes that all this recent propaganda, these ever repeated demands, that the Government should guarantee "the security of the home, the security of livelihood and the security of social insurance" causes him to wonder if the prospect of so much sheltering, so much safeguarding, so much financial protection, so much paternalism will cause his boys to discount, disregard, despite his teachings.

I have, he says, tried to impress upon them that they must fit themselves to make their own way in the world, that they must develop self-reliance, that they must cultivate a spirit of many independence, that they must be prepared to earn every penny of them, that they must expect nothing for nothing in this world.

To achieve this, I have emphasized to them that they must be studious and industrious, that they must exercise rational frugality and self-denial until they have accumulated a competency, that they must aspire not only to take care of themselves and their dependents, but to acquire means to aid generously those who are in need.

I have warned them against extravagance, ostentation, thriftlessness, thoughtlessness, in order that they may escape the hardships and humiliations which befall so many in old age, explaining that it is infinitely better to be able to bestow charity than to be compelled to accept it.

"Don't let any professor convince you," I tell them, "that 'the world owes you a living.' Get it firmly into your head that it is up to you to fit yourself to earn a living and that you will encounter plenty of competition. Don't hesitate to sacrifice in the fore part of your life if you hope to fare well in the later part of your life. Rainy days will come. Make diligent provision for them."

I tell them that, going forth in this spirit, eager to put more into the world than they hope to take out of it, and possessing unshakable faith in the eternal laws of justice and righteousness, they will find life joyous, they will accept difficulties as a challenge to their manhood, that, doing the right, they will never be tempted to give way to despair, but will find their own life increasing in happiness and service with the passing years.

Above all, that they must not be drones, loafers, leanners; that they must exert themselves to the utmost to be useful; that through self-discipline and self-denial they may reasonably hope to earn the means to practice generosity and unselfishness.

Now, however, there is dangled before them the prospect of an earthly Utopia, ruled by a Santa Claus Government, pictured as prepared to shoulder responsibilities which I was taught could be and must be discharged only by each individual for himself, responsibilities which were portrayed not only as inescapable, but as essential to the development of sturdy manhood, development of the soul, development of sterling character.

I am somewhat troubled lest my own young men and other young men may imbibed the notion that hereafter there is to be less need for supreme effort, less need for self-denial and self-discipline, less need for sacrificing to save, less necessity for self-reliance, less occasion to very ever finding work to do in the world or to sweat to perform it untidily, less reason for systematically striving to provide for old age.

Perhaps this man is unduly concerned about the effect which all the loose talk of to-day about the future of the future that the Government will look after everybody at all times and under all possible sets of circumstances—is having on the youth of the country. Possibly his anxieties and questionings will prove wholly unwarranted. Let it be hoped so for his sake, and the sake of his four boys and of all other young men who may be tempted to disregard the teachings, the lessons and experiences of past generations and, throwing self-reliance and self-effort to the winds, become leanners on the state.

Nevertheless, all thoughtful and conscientious fathers and mothers must be perturbed as they witness the outpourings of dreamers and faddists preaching false doctrines and seeking to wean the young people of to-day away from acceptance of and belief in those cardinal qualities which constituted the characters of men and women who have left their impress on the life and progress of the world, and lived useful lives. The worst enemies of youth are those self-appointed advocates and saviours who present to them as ideal a life of abject contentment and leisure, free of personal responsibilities, free of worry, free of difficulties, with Governments playing the role of Santa Claus every week and month of the year.

Chain Is Growing

The solid gold chain worn by the Lord Mayor of Dublin, worth $50,000, has been handed down from official to official for the past 237 years without so much as a link being fished in transit. Indeed, it's the custom for the outgoing Lord Mayor to add a gold link to the chain as he passes it to his successor.

Improve Montreal Harbor

May Move Passenger Section Five Miles Eastward

Plans for the complete rebuilding of Montreal harbor were outlined at a meeting of the Montreal harbor commissioners. The plans would allow quicker access from the St. Lawrence river, higher water, easier dredging in the softer bottom and elimination of the "St. Mary's current."

It was learned the harbor plans will in time move the whole passenger harbor about five miles eastward. The drawings show eight new piers, four of which will be long piers likely accommodating two ships, while in between them are four shorter piers. It is expected the new piers will accommodate about 40 vessels.

Decision to move the harbor further east, it was learned, came after a statement by Chief Harbor Engineer Paul Lecallier that dredging is a much easier task in the softer bottom further down the river.

Moving of the passenger section eastward, with softer bottom allowing easier dredging which would deepen the water, is expected to bring larger ocean-going ships to Montreal. In time it is hoped to have the channel deepened to 40 feet.

The St. Mary's Current, which makes shipping at times hazardous, is practically negligible further down the river, it was stated.

The new harbor development would cut down the time in the run from Quebec to Montreal by about an hour.

SHE PLAYS ORGAN AT 75 YEARS

Takes Kruschen To Keep Rheumatism Away

Writing to tell how she keeps her activity, this wonderful old woman states:—

"My hands were becoming so crippled that I had to give up piano and organ playing—and almost entirely gave up knitting. I have been using Kruschen Salts for nearly two years and I am very pleased with the result. Last August I played two church services on the organ, and hope to do so again this August. My fingers are nearly straight, and quite supple, and I am 75. I have recommended Kruschen Salts to many people."—A.A.C.

The six mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole bloodstream, neutralizing uric acid, which is the recognized cause of rheumatism. They also restore the eliminating organs to proper working order, and so prevent constipation, thereby checking the further formation of uric acid and other body poisons which undermine the health.

Currency Stabilization

Want Anglo-U.S. Conference To Settle The Question

Stabilization of world currencies was introduced into the budget debate in the British House of Commons by Sir Herbert Samuel, leader of the Liberal opposition, and other speakers.

"I regret the chancellor in his report had expressed a desire to secure a measure of stabilization of currency and could have told us some form of a conference is contemplated with the United States upon which, fully as much as upon ourselves and France, the decision rests," said Sir Herbert.

"Japan depreciates the yen, America the dollar, Belgium the franc, Britain the pound," Sir Herbert continued. "Depreciation is one of the prime reasons for the low level at which the state of the world continues."

"I regret the chancellor has made no survey of this important factor," Furney Braithwaite, Conservative, echoed Sir Herbert's sentiments.

Dominate Cotton Industry

Japanese Wrestling The Industry From Chinese Territory

Japanese commercial expansion in North China has reached the point of almost complete domination of the cotton industry, most important enterprise in the area, with only one mill remaining wholly under Chinese ownership.

Threats of actual military penetration of this region, formerly the seat of the Chinese dynasty, have long since died down, but observers point out the Japanese conquest of the vast territory north of the Yellow river continues with Japanese capitalists, diplomats and businessmen taking up where the soldiers left off.

Real Market For Seeds

Canada Imports Thousands Of Pounds From Many Countries

Since last July Canada has imported over 1,000,000 pounds of field crop seeds and 937,000 pounds of garden seeds not including flowers. Among the biggest importations are 484,000 pounds of alfalfa seed, 89,000 pounds of blue grass, 32,000 pounds of Cheving's fescue, 468,000 pounds of red clover, 130,000 pounds of Red Top, 98,000 pounds of perennial rye grass, 149,000 pounds of timothy seed, 47,000 pounds of white clover, 242,000 pounds of mangel seed, 57,000 pounds of rape, 722,000 pounds of sugar beet seed, 125,000 pounds of vetches.

In the garden seeds there were 83,000 pounds of beans, 64,000 pounds of beet seed, 70,000 pounds of carrot seed, 123,000 pounds of corn, 15,000 pounds of cucumber seed, 27,000 pounds of lettuce, 28,000 pounds of onion seed, 297,000 pounds of peas, 81,000 pounds of radish, 51,000 pounds of spinach, 14,000 pounds of turnip seeds.

The sources of origin of these seeds is of interest; for instance the peas came chiefly from the United States and the British Isles, but there was also some from France, New Zealand, Holland and Japan. Over four hundred pounds came from Japan. The turnip seed came from the British Isles and the United States and also from Holland, Denmark, Japan and China.

The seed of kohi rabi was collected from the United States, Great Britain, Holland, Denmark and Italy.

The sugar beets came chiefly from Germany, but there were also sizeable amounts from Holland, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Britain, the United States and Denmark.

Spain enters into the picture in the onion seeds as well as the U.S.A., the British Isles, France, Holland, Italy, Japan and China.

Strange Substance

Produce Hormone That Has Effect Of Taming Wild Animals

Isaiah's prophecy that the lion and the lamb shall lie down together and a little child lead them was shown to be a scientific possibility at the American Philosophical Society meeting in Philadelphia.

The chemical substance to tame both animals is available if anyone wants to try it out.

The society was shown motion pictures of a fierce, flesh-eating, grown rat lying down with a new-born squab and trying to mother it. The pictures were shown by Dr. Oscar Riddle, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The rat had received an injection of prolactin, a hormone produced by the pituitary glands of human and all mammals, including lions. The rat was an unmated female, with nothing but wild instincts, and no previous experience with mothering anything.

The prolactin induced immediately a maternal instinct so powerful as to make the rat's natural appetite for eating young squabs.

Prolactin was discovered three years ago by Dr. Riddle. Previous experiments with it indicate that it acts on all animals in similar fashion.

Its primary function is to cause female mammals to give milk for their young. It has done that even when given to males.

The milkman is becoming quite diversified in his line of products. Not only does he deliver orange juice, eggs, cheese and milk to New York residents, but in Providence he has added oysters to his morning deliveries.

SOAP

When fat or oil and alkali are heated together under proper conditions soap and glycerin are produced. Soap is made commercially on a very large scale. The oil or melted fat is poured into huge kettles together with a solution of lye. As a rule the kettles are very large, 500,000 pounds or more of soap being made in some of them in a single heating. They are provided with coils of steam-pipe for heating the liquid. The fat and alkali are stirred by forcing live steam into the bottom of the mixture. The chemical reaction which takes place in soap-making is completed in about one day.

The soap is then suspended as very fine particles in the liquids present, or the chemist would say that the soap is in the form of a colloidal dispersion. To obtain the soap in the solid form common salt is added and this process is known as "salting out". After the salt is added and the mixture heated, the soap rises to the top of the liquid and the soap thus obtained is purified by washing and settling processes and is then run into the mixing machine called the cutcher. Here it is mixed with substances such as perfume, borax, water-glass, or washing soda. It is then run into large molds called frames to harden, after which it is cut and pressed into cakes of the desired size.

Transparent soaps are usually made by dissolving dry soap in alcohol and adding from 15 to 25% of sugar. Castile soaps are made of olive oil. The colour of mottled soaps is produced by the addition of Prussian blue or some similar pigment. Floating soaps owe their lightness to bubbles of air and naphtha soaps contain about 5% of petroleum naphtha. Scouring soaps contain from 5 to 10% of soap and from 80 to 90% of some material such as fine sand or volcanic ash. Soap powders usually consist of a mixture of washing soda and ground soap to the extent of 10 to 25%.

"Where'd you bury him?" asked Stone shortly.

"Over there. . . Our fire was there. . . His finger pointed to a dip in the land. The drifting sand had filled the hollow and at first Stone did not recognize the place. 'It was a sleepin' there. . . ' Peyotl pointed. . . 'Next thing I knowed Mist' Sam waked me up and I seen . . . It . . . We buried him over by that clump o' mesquite.

Stone flung him aside and walked over to the pile of loose rocks. How much of this fantastic tale was true; how much the phantasm of a disordered mind?

He threw those rocks aside as a boy throws pebbles and he was breathless when he saw what he sought . . . some tattered rags and a scrap of old leather that the coyotes had left. There was more than that but the desert wind and the sun and the scouring winds had done their work and he uncovered only a handful of sand-scoured bones to tell whether Peyotl Gregg had lied or not. His hand hung poised over the skull, but for reasons, he hated to touch. But that skull was vital. If Peyotl told the truth that skull would be shattered.

He glanced at Peyotl, but Peyotl had got out one of his hoped cigarettes and was oblivious to all. He picked up that repulsive skull and examined it carefully. 'If Peyotl had killed this man by smashing his head with a rock then the bones would be broken. But the skull was intact! Not till he turned it over, about to cast it aside, did he see a gaping hole

He turned the greswome object over and over in his hands. Then something popped at his feet with a soft thud and glancing at it, he dropped the skull with a sharp oath. There, lying between his feet, flattened as to the point, its sides scored with green verdigris, lay a forty-one caliber soft lead bullet!

With a quick little gasping oath, he picked it up and fitted it to the hole in the back of the skull. It fitted! There was no doubt about it. The man had died, not from having his head smashed with a rock but from a bullet shot through the back of his head at very close range.

He replaced all the bones except the skull, replaced the rocks and went back to the horses where Peyotl sat crouching against the wind.

"This man was shot with a forty-one caliber gun," he said.

Peyotl stared at him dully and Stone, angered at his stupidity, kicked him.

"This man . . . If it's Kane . . . How'm I to know if it's Kane?" he said.

"Look at his shoes," said Peyotl with a flash of intelligence. "He allus put 'K' on the heel in iron tacks."

After long search Stone found one shoe and came back satisfied.

"Where'd you get that gun from that you shot Kane with?" he asked.

"At that Peyotl came to life."

"I never had a gun in my life," he said.

"But when I tookken the gun from Mist' Sam. You got that. . ."

"Yes, Sheriff Garcey's got it now. Who did that gun belong to?"

"I stole you I lifted it from Mist' Sam. . ."

"And he was with you up here when . . . when Kane was killed?"

"Yeah. He sure was."

Stone stood and stared at him. He could hardly believe what he knew to be true. He turned to his pony, reared the saddle and whirled on Peyotl:

"Get into saddle at once," he snapped. "We're goin' back at once!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

Dustin's summary arrest galvanized Seco. Men gathered before every store discussing it and questioning for details. For five years Sam Dustin and Goddard had been considered immune to arrest and arrest Jim Garcey had taken him as casually as he might have taken any common brawler and no man knew exactly why. He met Dustin outside the Silver Dollar and touched him on the arm as Dustin stopped Doc Epps to question him about the reported death of Gerald Keene.

"I've got a warrant for your arrest, Dustin," he said. "The charge is violation of the Narcotic Act."

"What?" Dustin spun about and his eyes snapped: "You mean that you're arrestin' me? You're crazy, Sheriff. . ."

"Mebbe. That's got nothin' to do with the matter. The question is . . . are you comin' with me or do I have to take you?"

"There was a light in Jim Garcey's eyes that spoke more plainly than any words. Dustin made up his mind at once.

"I'll come with you of course. This is absurd. Who's sworn out the warrant?"

"A man named Stone from the Hourglass. He swears he found you with your pockets stuffed with Peyotl cigarettes and Peyotl Gregg says you've kept him supplied for years."

"The . . . the lyn' hound. . ."

Dustin burst into a torrent of invective. "You mean to tell me that you're arrestin' me, a well-known citizen here, on such an absurd charge? I want to see a lawyer first of all."

"First of all, you'll come with me," said Garcey who knew that, with Dustin once locked up, he could keep him incommunicado for some time.

There was no help for it and Jim Garcey, mindful of details, did not offer Dustin the hospitality of his house as he had done with Carr. He conducted his prisoner to the only lock-up in Seco and locked him into the big steel cage behind his office with injunctions to his deputy to allow him to see no one except under special instructions.

"You're all right for the night," he said. "Water, grub'll be supplied from the Bon Ton restaurant, two books and a paper. I'll tell Bill Masters that you want to see him. By the way, your attorney, ain't he?" By the way, Dustin . . .

"You might be doin' some little figurin' on your own account. The penalty for murder in this State is hangin'. Cattle-rustin' an' bein' accessory before the act in a shootin' case carries a stiff sentence too. . ."

With this Partisan arrow Garcey left and Dustin, appalled, stared after him. What could the man know? The very uncertainty brought the sweat to his forehead in great beads. Surely he had covered his tracks too well to have been discovered. What Garcey had said must be just a shot in the dark? He could know nothing. Even if Peyotl Gregg had told all he knew, no jury would convict a man on the testimony of one witness and that witness a drug-addict. For the charge on which he was arrested Dustin knew he would be free in a short time.

But Sam Dustin failed to remember that the day was Saturday and that Monday was May the thirtieth, a National holiday and that all offices would be closed. That three-day period gave Stone all the time he needed but it was late when he rode up Seco's main street, tired and dirty, with Peyotl sulking at his heels and scared to death. Jameson stepped first and fairly dragged Stone in his office.

"Well. . . . If said Jameson quivering with excitement.

"I got enough to convict any man before a fair-minded jury," said Stone. "Has Garcey arrested Dustin?"

"He nailed him Saturday night," said Jameson. "He'll be held a while. Dustin's squealin' like a stuck pig over what he's got to do. He gets loose and Spike Goddard is threatenin' to secede from the Union if Garcey don't run Dustin loose tomorrow. You'd better look out for Dustin when he gets loose."

"He'll not get loose," said Stone. "Listen to me, Jameson. . . . And Stone told him all that had taken place and wound up by laying Kane's old shoes and the shattered skull on the desk. At sight of the skull the little editor shrank back.

"Take that thing out to here," said he. "I got no use for it."

"You might have use for it editin' the paper," grinned Stone. "Wait a bit, old man. I'm convinced that Dustin killed Kane. We know the motive. Kane took Dustin into the hills to show him the gold mine that he found on Hourglass lands. Dustin didn't want to divide with Kane so he killed him and laid the blame very cleverly on that poor fool Gregg. If he'd killed Kane with that rock that he smeared with his blood, we'd never have discovered it. But he didn't. He shot him. Here's the bullet that smashed his skull. Of course we've got to show that Peyotl told the truth when he said he got the gun from Dustin when he shot Keene. Get your car and we'll run out to the Broken Spur and see if we can get Goddard to talk. If he doesn't know how much we really know, he may drop something. Get Jim Garcey too. We'll need him."

That machine slammed its way up the drive before the Broken Spur just before sunset and Spike Goddard received them with grim looks. He eyed the shrinking Peyotl menacingly though he was inwardly ill at ease. How much did these men know? What had they come for? But he ushered them into the little office and Stone played the first card.

He slapped the Derringer pistol on the desk and turned to Peyotl.

"Tell Sheriff Garcey exactly where you took this pistol from," he said.

And before Spike Goddard could stop him, Peyotl jerked open the desk drawer.

"He kept it there," he said; "he opened it himself and showed it to me and told me about Mr. Kane. . . . Keene . . . Whatever his name is. . . Here's the green box o' cart-

Honors For Rudyard Kipling

Now Approaching His 70th Birthday, His Name May Appear In Jubilee List

To Rudyard Kipling, often referred to as "the forgotten man of English letters," may come at last some measure of official homage which his legion of admirers has thought is long overdue.

Now approaching his 70th birthday, the writer is being mentioned as an almost certain recipient of garlands from the king's jubilee honors list.

Strong representations, it is understood, have been made in behalf of the "soldiers' poet," who was the first Englishman to receive the Nobel prize for poetry almost 30 years ago. Although his famous "Recessional" was chosen to be read at Queen Victoria's second jubilee in 1897, he has been given no official part in the program of celebrations this year of King George's 25 years on the throne.

"It was over that damned red-headed girl of Carr's," said Goddard hotly. "I told him he was playin' the damned fool. . . . I told him he'd sure as hell trip himself. . . ."

Appalled at the significance of his thoughtless words he stood aghast but it was too late. Stone and Garcey and Jameson had all heard what he said and knew its dread significance. Garcey swung on him at once.

"I'll just nail you as an accessory before the fact," he said. "You'll come with me."

And before Spike Goddard knew what was happening, Garcey slipped a pair of light manacles about his wrists. The feel of the cold steel and the click of the lock struck a chill to the heart of the ranchman. He sank into a chair and burst into shrill-wailing profanity.

"Be careful what you say," warned Garcey. "It may be used against you."

"You've got nothin' on me," snarled Goddard. "I'm not mixed up in this at all."

Find Skeletons Of Human Beings Believed To Have Belonged To Medieval Times

Several skeletons of human bodies, believed to have belonged to medieval times, have been found near Newbury, England. The bones were discovered two feet below the surface, and the positions show that the bodies were buried with their heads to the east. The spot is near a building known as "The Litten," on the site of which at one time was the priory of St. Bartholomew, and attributed to be a chapel, part of which, still stands.

Little Helps For This Week

Consider the lilies of the field how they grow. Matthew 6:28.

They do not toil: Content with their allotted task They do not grow, they do not ask A richer lot, a higher sphere, But in their lowliness appear, And grow and smile, and do their best, And unto God they leave the rest.

Interpose no barrier to His life-giving power, working in you all the good pleasure of His will. Yield yourself up utterly to His sweet control. Put your growing into His hands as completely as you have put all your other affairs. Suffer Him to manage it as He will. Do not concern yourself about it, nor even think of it. Trust Him absolutely and always. Accept each moment's dispensation as it comes to you from His dear hands—as being the needed sunshine or dew for that moment's growth. Say a continual "yes" to your Father's will. Look at the flowers in the serene summer days, they quietly open their petals and the sun shines into them with its gentle influence. So will God do for thee if thou wilt yield thyself to Him.

Will Officiate As Warden

John Buchan To Participate At Celebrations At Neidpath Castle

John Buchan, Canada's next governor-general, has accepted an invitation to officiate as warden of Neidpath castle at celebrations at the historic stronghold next June. Neidpath castle is the border fortress where Mary, Queen of Scots, spent the night of August 27, 1563. It is situated in the romantic district where Buchan drew his inspiration for his first book, "John Burray of Burray." The functions in connection with the royal jubilee are slated for June 19.

One of the functions of the International Boundary Commission is to maintain the boundary between Canada and the United States as at present constituted in such a state of effective demarcation that at no point on the boundary need there be any doubt about its exact location.
